SHORT BIO

SOFTBLECH are a post wave duo from Berlin. Between The Cure and Fontaines D.C., Dennis Hörtinger (bass/vocals) and Henri Röttger (guitar/vocals) layer electric bass and guitar over driving drum machine beats and write songs that stay honest inside difficult emotions.

BIO

SOFTBLECH are a post wave duo from Berlin: Dennis Hörtinger (bass/vocals) and Henri Röttger (guitar/vocals). Post wave sits at the intersection of post punk and dark wave: somewhere between The Cure and Fontaines D.C., writing about the things that move them deeply, layering electric bass and guitar over driving drum machine beats.

They write from the inside out. Their songs don't try to make sense of difficult emotions, they try to stay honest inside them. Breakups, doubt, love that changes shape, the fear of losing someone twice over. The kind of feelings that resist being put into words, which is exactly why they keep trying.

As a duo without a drummer, they turned necessity into a sound: the drum machine is no compromise but their signature. Since forming in Hamburg in 2024, SOFTBLECH have released a steady run of singles, produced together with Leon Kaack, Birk Buttchereyt, Lukas Kurz and Arne Schramm. Their debut single "Love Me Now" was played on the podcast "Fest & Flauschig". So far, their music has been streamed more than 215,000 times and added to over 1,500 playlists on Spotify. They have shared stages with Night Tapes (Urban Spree, Berlin), Dews Pegahorn (Lark, Berlin & Hebebühne, Hamburg), WU LYF (Lido, Berlin), Day We Ran (Privatclub, Berlin) and Tauchen, and played Berghain Kantine.

Alongside these support slots, SOFTBLECH have organised and headlined several indie nights of their own in Berlin bars, each of them playing to a full room. Over time, this has grown into a small, loyal following that knows the songs and keeps coming back to their shows.
